

HOW TO WRITE AN ESSAY

An essay is a type of writing in which the author tries to inform and persuade. To write an essay you have to follow some steps:

1. Choose the Type of Essay

The first step to write an essay is to define what type of essay you are writing. There are four main categories into which essays can be grouped:

- Narrative essay - Tell a story or impart information about your subject in a straightforward, orderly manner, like in a story.
- Persuasive essay - Convince the reader about some point of view.
- Expository essay - Explain to the reader how to perform a given process.
- Descriptive essay - Focus on the details of what is going on. For example, if you want to write a descriptive essay about your trip to the park, you would give great details about what you have experienced: how the grass felt beneath your feet, what the park benches looked like, and anything else the reader would need to feel as if he were there.

Knowing what kind of essay you are trying to write can help you decide on a topic and structure your essay in the best way possible. Here are few other types of essays:

- Argumentative essay - Take a position on a controversial issue and present evidence in favor of your position.
- Compare and contrast essay - Identify similarities and differences between two subjects that are, typically, under the same umbrella.
- Problem solution essay - Describe a problem, convince the reader to care about the problem, propose a solution, and be prepared to dismantle objections.
- Informative essay - Educate the reader on a particular topic with facts.

2. Brainstorm Your Topic

You cannot write an essay unless you have an idea of what to write about. Brainstorming is the process in which you come up with the essay topic; you need to simply sit and think of ideas during this phase.

- Write down everything that comes to mind as you can always narrow those topics down later.
- Brainstorming can be a great way to develop a topic more deeply and to recognize connections between various facets of your topic.
- Once you have a list of possible topics, it's time to choose the best one that will answer the question posed for your essay.
- Pick the best topic idea from your list and start moving forward with your essay writing.

3. Research the Topic

Once you have done your brainstorming and chosen your topic, you may need to do some research to write a good essay. Go to the library or search online for information about your topic and interview people who might be experts in the subject.

Keep your research organized so that it will be easy for you to refer back to. This also makes it easier to cite your sources when writing your final essay.

4. Develop a Thesis

Your thesis statement is the main point of your essay; it is essentially one sentence that says what the essay is about. For example, your thesis statement might be "Dogs are descended from wolves." You can then use this as the basic premise to write your entire essay, remembering that all the different points throughout the process must lead back to this main thesis. You should usually state your thesis in your introductory paragraph.

Additionally, the thesis statement should be broad enough that you have enough to say about it, but not so broad that you can't be thorough.

5. Outline Your Essay

The next step is to outline what you are going to write about. This essentially means; draw the skeleton of your paper. Writing an outline can help to ensure that your paper is logical, well organized and flows properly. If you've been tasked with an argumentative essay, here is the best formula for an argumentative essay outline:

- Start by writing the thesis statement at the top then write a topic sentence for each paragraph below that. This means; you should know exactly what each of your paragraphs is going to be about before you write them.
- Do not jumble too many ideas in each paragraph or the reader may become confused.
- Ensure you have transitions between paragraphs so the reader understands how the paper flows from one idea to the next.
- Fill in supporting facts from your research under each paragraph. Make sure each paragraph ties back to your thesis, and creates a cohesive and understandable essay.

6. Write the Essay

Once you have an outline, it's time to start writing.

-Write based on the outline itself to create a whole, cohesive and clear essay.

-Edit and re-read your essay to make sure it sounds exactly the way you want it to. Here are some things to remember:

- Revise for clarity, consistency and structure.
- Each of your thesis paragraphs should have a topic sentence that tells readers what the rest of the paragraph will be about.
- Make sure everything flows together. As you move through the essay, transition words will be paramount. They are the glue that connects the paragraphs together and prevents the essay from sounding disjointed. You can even use a list of transition words to help you get started.
- Reread your introduction and conclusion. Will the reader walk away knowing exactly what your paper was about?

- In your introduction, it's important to include a hook. This is the line that will lure the readers in and encourage them to want to learn more. For further information, check out how to write a hook.

7. Check Spelling and Grammar

Now the essay is written, but you're not quite done. Reread what you've written, looking out for mistakes and typos.

- Revise, for technical errors.
- Check for grammar, punctuation and spelling errors. You cannot always rely on a spell checker to recognize every spelling mistake. Sometimes, you can write a word incorrectly but your misspelling will also be a word, such as spelling "from" as "form."
- Another common area of concern is quotation marks. It's important to cite your sources with accuracy and clarity.
