

A quantifier is a word or phrase which is used before a noun to indicate the amount or quantity. "Some", "many", "a lot of" and "a few" are examples of quantifiers.

1	A lot of / lots of / plenty of
	many	much
2	A few	A little some any

- 1) Large quantity: use a lot/ lots without of at the end of a sentence.
Ex: I like her a lot.
- 2) Small quantity:
Use some in interrogative? When you offer or ask for something.
Ex: can I have some tea?

Type of quantifiers:

1. Specific Quantifiers: give us an exact number or amount.

- Cardinal: one, two,.....etc
- Ordinal: first, second,.....etc
- Each: every one of a group
- Every: all members of a group
- Several: more than a few

2. Non-Specific Quantifiers: give us a general idea of quantity.

Much , many, few, little, a lot of,

3. Universal Quantifiers: say something to everyone or everything in a group.

All, every, each, any.....etc

4. Partitive Quantifiers: talk about part of whole or a fraction.

Half, quarter, a third, two-thirds,.....etc

5. Quantifiers for comparisons: used to compare quantities or amounts.

More, less, most ,least.

6. Quantifiers with Countable and uncountable :

- Countable: used to specify the quantity that can be counted.

Many, several, all, both, a lot,.....etc

- Uncountable: used to indicate quantity that can not be counted.

Much, little, some, any,.....etc

Best of Luck