

People's Democratic Republic of Algeria.

Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research.

Abderrahmane MIRA University of Bejaia.

Faculty of Human and Social Sciences.

M^r. DJADDA Mahmoud.

Grade; Class “A” lecturer.

Department of Sociology.

Semester 05:

Online module course: methodology of dissertation writing

(Course+ TD).

Level; Master 02

Specialty: sociology of organization and work

Hourly volume: 45h

Credits: 03

Coefficient: 04

THE OBJECTIVE

The objective of this seminar is to prepare students for the work they will have to provide as part of their dissertation. It is made up of sessions of very different natures (ex-cathedra or not, in full groups or not), partly traditional and partly distance learning. These different elements address all the points that students must know to complete their dissertation: delimitation of a subject and problem, corpus and methodologies, time management and work planning, scientific and argumentative writing, citations of sources and bibliographies, documentary research and state of the art, empirical part, etc. Some of these subjects will be applied within the seminar, others will be theoretical. Students will sometimes be required to work on self-learning via E-Learning.

Table of content

1-The Dissertation

2-The objective of a research dissertation

3-the stages of carrying out a research

4-the choice of subject and the supervisor

5-Exploratory research

6-Bibliographic research.

7-The choice of methodological tools and data collection techniques

8-field research

9-collection and processing of research

10-writing and finalizing the dissertation